To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Jonathan Flettin Marattukalam, a student I have taught in the Department of Economics at St. Xavier's College Mumbai. I have found Jonathan to be a thoughtful, diligent, and promising student who consistently performs well and shows significant potential for further growth.

In class, Jonathan demonstrates a solid grasp of economic theory and applies it with care in written work and occasionally in class discussion. While he has not been the most vocal participant during lectures, he listens attentively and engages with the material in a thoughtful and reflective manner. He approaches assignments with seriousness and consistency and has a commendable attitude toward learning.

What sets Jonathan apart is his initiative and creativity outside the classroom. In his second semester, as part of a group project to run a student-led business, he developed the concept for a customized poster business. With the help of his group, it quickly became the best-selling venture in the class, demonstrating not only collaborative skills but also an ability to identify and respond to student interests with effective marketing, and entrepreneurial spirit.

Additionally, Jonathan has been an active member in the broader academic community. In his second year, he served as an editor for The Arthniti, the official ISSN recognised research journal of the department of Economics (ISSN 2277-1344). He collaborated with three student authors and provided guidance on research methodology, writing techniques, and academic paper structuring. While I have not worked with him directly in this capacity, I am aware through the Head of Department that he has taken his role seriously and contributed to the editorial, publication, and research process with responsibility and professionalism.

I recommend him with confidence, and I'm happy to provide further details if required.

Sincerely,
Fr. Vivian Almeida
